Securing the grounds

New projects always begin with the first step. When looking at the construction site at Märker Cement, the first series of steps is already quite visible. Both, the solid concrete basis for the preheater and the first kiln pier, have almost reached their full heights. Foundation works for the cooler building are in full progress showing the future footprint.

The new kiln line no. 8 is being built right next to the existing production line which it will replace after commissioning. The start of this important project directly in the heart of Germany and during the difficult Covid-19 times shows the commitment of Märker Cement towards the plant, its employees, and the region.
